SEASONS GREETINGS 1996

On the CNN regular noon newscast reaching cable viewers in the upstate New York area on Wednesday, September 29, there was a notification that the CIA had run a clandestine psychical research project code-named "Stargate"; had spent twenty years and twenty million dollars on this project to date; was discontinuing this project but would retain three psychics on the payroll until July 1996--and had found the psychics utilized on such projects as locating the whereabouts of Lybian General M. Khadafy to be "unreliable".

However, at eight in the evening on this same CNN cable news network it was announced that the CIA intended to CONTINUE psychical research unless cut off in these projects by an action of Congress.

Two aspects of this droll disclosure need to be addressed:

FIRST: It is unlikely that "black world" research into esp/pk, UFOs, hypnosis, behavior modification techniques and other, related topics for the purposes of warfare will ever be terminated by a conventional legislative decision.

SECOND: Previous to these conflicting memorandums issued through the news media, the CIA had hired various stage magicians to DISCREDIT this area of research in the eyes of the public.

As the old tyme ghetto blues riff goes:
"Don't let your right hand know what your left hand do/
An unseen eye is watching you."

WHICH CHIPWITCH CHIP IS WATCHING WHICH?

This newsletter has been receiving notifications from various political groups about alleged government involvement in activities ranging from terrorist bombing on through deliberate weather modification by means of electromagnetic bombardment of the ionosphere.

At the most extreme end of the spectrum of allegations, an article by Laura Knight Martin in an astrological newsletter from Florida suggests that Timothy McVeigh (who is now being held for trial as regards terrorist activities perpetrated at the Federal building in Oklahoma City) has had a microchip implanted in his body by extraterrestrials.

Most of these "politics of expanded consciousness" brochures and advertisements have little to do with the direct investigation of true "ufo experiences" and/or "supernatural" events which are perceived by witnesses to be "paranormal" or anomalous in impact. An event is truly judged to be anomalous only in comparison to the pre-expected progress of the ordinary mundane activities of these witnesses.

Anomalous events may involve politics, but all anomalous events are not due to political causes. Therefore, it has become necessary to state that the purpose of the MAGICK MIRROR newsletter is basically research into the true supernatural and/or "ufo" contact. This editor is not functionally linked to any groups or individuals who espouse racist or sexist politico-social views OR who scapegoat the democratic process of government now attempting to govern the United States.

As Abraham Lincoln is oft quoted as saying: "A house divided against itself cannot stand." A WORLD divided against itself is not ready to meet, much less intelligently resist, Advanced Intelligence from another planetary system. A clever, negative strategy is to divide friend, relatives and/or political allies on the basis of petty contractual, social or territorial gripes. This editor is wise to this strategy and will not participate in divisive commentary--only positive, truthful research.

However, IF that research leads to the exposure of "toads under a slimy rock" (terrestrial and/or extraterrestrial) this newsletter will be the first to publish such unpleasant documentation if the information is viable as an item of reasonably shared reality.

Laura Knight Martin, in her article for ASTRO-LOGICAL LIASONS, writes about Oklahoma City bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh: "Was he abducted and implanted? I think so. Was he controlled and manipulated to do what he did? I think he was." Whew! Assertions like this had better be accompanied by some form of documentary evidence or they sound like a steel drum band screaming downwind, in broad daylight: "I, I, aye, yi...noche de muchas estrellas...!"

I (editor of the MAGICK MIRROR) think that researchers into the area of esp/pk and ufos at this particular historical/hysterical juncture have to admit to themselves that there may be sophisticated behavior modification techniques directed toward them, and toward their research, which are not extraterrestrial but may seem "alien" and/or "magical" simply because the average individual has no immediate knowledge of these behavior modification techniques, much less the intent to practice them.

Have you taken a look at the inside of your TV set lately? Can you repair the latest model VCR yourself? Would you know if there was an extra capacitor or cellular chip in your set? It is possible that the "vampire-like, alien presence" which certain sensitive persons telepathically detect is actually some egghead human technician without emotional and/or social insight who has been employed (or is self-employed) in trying to re-wire the behavior of individuals to conform to some pre-anticipated paradigm.

But not all of this screwloose attempted manipulation need be governmental. The FBI once documented the existence of sophisticated computer and electronic expertise among members of "The Order", a far right political secret society which is computer-linked nation-wide in the United States, internationally-connected, and has the ability to employ very sophisticated techniques to brainwash political terrorists. A broad spectrum of possible origins should be considered when behavior modification techniques are detected or suspected.

It is only by giving the Devil his due credit--on every dimensional level--that researchers into anomalous political and social behavior are going to make any real progress.

-E. Macer-Stay

"People individually and collectively are manipulable creatures. Marine Corps boot camp taught me that. They conditioned us into a mental state where we were mindless, screaming, potential killers, all fired up and ready to "Charge!" up whatever hill without asking why--and ignoring the fact that we might well not come back down on our own feet. If you do not defend yourself by filling your mind with a true understanding of what is happening in the world, then others will fill it for you; and at some point in time use the information and the conditioning that they have done on your mind, the ideas and feelings they have planted in your breast, to manipulate you to their purpose."

JOHN STOCKWELL
ex-CIA operative

ED: Yet, what is your actual purpose, Mr. Stockwell? Is your book THE PRAETORIAN GUARD, which details alleged clandestine abuses within U.S. intelligence agencies, on the level or is it a verbal "Trojan Horse", designed to provoke unseemly statements and reactivity in those individuals who may suspect that there is a "secret government" of appointed intelligence operatives attempting to take control of the overt electoral, democratic process?

MEDICAL CARPENTERS?

A bizarre idea occurred to this editor after seeing the "Alien Autopsy Film" on FOX-tv November 26. Suppose some "behavior modification" psychologist in the black world of government research had gotten the idea that it was necessary to "cure" the widespread "abduction phenomenon" by presenting the hoax autopsy of an alien on prime time TV. This strange "autopsy" is actually the direct operational reverse of the usual "abduction" scenario, wherein medical procedures are performed on a helpless and paralysed human.

CLOSET FILMO?

Where is the alleged "86 year old photographer" of this procedure who "wishes to remain anonymous" and has had the most significant (cranial and abdominal) footage of the "autopsy of an alien from outer space" in his closet as "out-takes" for fifty years? Until this individual steps forward with an explanation as to why these crucial sections of the autopsy were considered documentary "out-takes" (no matter what their exposure might have been) it will remain the opinion of this editor that this "alien autopsy film" is a technically-sophisticated hoax perpetrated in very poor taste.

Usually, in professional film work, there are two or more cameras running at all times in order to ensure continuity and editing flexibility. If this is true for the filming of I LOVE LUCY, it should be assumed that in a matter of interplanetary medical importance "black world" technicians would also use at least two documentary film cameras: one on a stationary mounting, and one or more handheld "Filmos" to focus on details.

WHERE IS THE CONTINUITY FOOTAGE IF THIS IS GENUINE, PROFESSIONAL DOCUMENTARY FILM WORK FROM 1947?

ANOMALY COMBO?

The "alien cadaver" used in these alleged "out takes" may involve a form of stage prop necromancy similar to that used in the "Piltdown Man" hoax, which was engineered during the first decade of the 20th century by anthropologist Charles Dawson.

Dawson, whose fraud was not proven false until 1952, forty-three years after his "discovery", had combined the skull of a modern man with the jaw of an ape and had antiqued the entire assemblage to give the appearance of prehistoric bone. If the freak medical conditions embodied by the "alien cadaver" are from a variety of individuals (not just one) and joined at the back of the torso, then a combination cadaver with an unusual abdominal and cranial content whose flesh actually bleeds and contracts could be surgically created for the purpose of deception.

Of course, the motivations for creating such a specimen, and such a hoax, are pathological in the extreme. One wonders whether—if this is such a surgical hoax—the mindwarp involved in the creation of this bizarre sculpture of flesh might be functionally related to the mindwarp operating in certain "livestock mutilation" situations.

ANOTHER POINT OF VIEW

The proofreader of this publication, George C. Andrews, differs with the editorial point of view on the alleged 1947 alien autopsy film. In the interests of fair journalistic coverage of anomalous events, Mr. Andrews' response is included herein.

To the Editor:

Since statements made by video producer Ray Santilli can not be assumed to be truthful, and since all statements attributed to the unknown cameraman have come through Mr. Santilli, I see nothing to be gained by argument over these statements, which are peripheral to the main point: is this an autopsy of an alien humanoid, or is it a hoax? The only meaningful evidence we have is the film itself. According to a Kodak spokesman, the coding indicates it was made in either 1947 or 1967, and could not have been made any later than 1967. As I see it, there are only three possibilities: 1) A dummy made out of wax or plastic 2) a human so deformed as to appear to be an alien 3) a previously unknown type of genuine, alien humanoid.

The first possibility can be ruled out because of the way the skin separates and then adheres around the scalpel just as human tissue would, an effect impossible to replicate on a dummy.

As to the second possibility, genetic abnormalities such as Turner Syndrome or Progeria may to some extent cause a human to have external resemblances to the cadaver, but there is no way they could cause internal organs and brain tissue to become completely non-human. Optiz Trigonocephaly Syndrome has been suggested, since it can cause deformations of internal organs, but no victim of this disease has been known to survive to maturity. Could Optiz deformations totally transform all internal organs and brain tissue in a specimen that not only survived into maturity but was apparently in robust health until its sudden death, as may be inferred from its well-developed muscular structure? This does not seem to me to be a plausible explanation.

That leaves us with the third possibility: a genuine, alien humanoid.

Sincerely,
George C. Andrews

ED: Since both Eastman-Kodak film with 1947 or 1967 markings and an antique Filmo camera from 1947, as well as antique operating room equipment and clock, are available as "stage props" to any film crew with trained continuity staff, this editor continues to feel that psychologically disturbed hoaxers may have put together a "combination cadaver" stuffed from the spinal area and back of the neck and taken footage of this surgical creation with an antique camera.

SHAZAM!

Captain Marvel of the Marvel Comics I read as a youth during the 1950's ((when I was able to give him some time away from my reading of the adventures of Wonder Woman)) had an electrical lightning bolt on the chest of the red jumpsuit he wore after shouting "Shazam" and transducing himself from a mortal into an Olympian hero.

Electromagnetic theory as a religious belief system is a concept I have long dicussed privately with persons who are technically adept and able to understand the historical progress of what we call "scientific" thought.

However, never before have I seen seriously objectified by another individual a system of faith in the electromagnetic system as a form of religious belief. Toward the end of his recent book GRAND ILLUSIONS, Dr. Greg Little presents a diagram of the known electromagnetic spectrum with the ultraviolet as embodying access to heaven and the infrared as embodying descent into hell. Dr. Little seems unaware that in so doing he is not reducing concepts of heaven and hell to a simple matter of comparitive frequency of electromagnetic vibrations, but is himself presenting a formulation of religious dogma entitled "The Electromagnetic Spectrum".

In the Fall 1995 SAMIZDAT newsletter, Spanish ufologist Manuel Carballal states: "Maybe you and I won't commit suicide upon discovering that religion has deceived us, but think of the millions of fanatics in all the world's religions.

The UFO phenomenon would be the greatest assault against our religions...The religion of the year 2000 will be an extraterrestrial one, with or without abductions."

Carabellal, who believes that the ufo phenomenon involves a mutation of consciousness which is not necessarily extraterrestrial, warns against a "collectivized mentality and consciousness, with no emotional or intellectual freedom" in context of which the "ufo phenomenon will become a new and dangerous religion with its own dogma and impostors".

Clearly, Dr. Little's vision of heaven and hell as being explicable according to comparative frequencies of the electromagnetic spectrum tends to indicate the direction into which this new "religion" Carabellal fears may travel.

If technical systems become a matter of religious dogma, and therefore unassailable as theories which potentially may become obsolete and be replaced by other theories, then we are in serious cultural and technological trouble. For we do not as yet have the entire cosmos completely described within known technical systems—much less any complete documentary description of our own solar system.

It is quite possible there is another form of energy out there which is not electromagnetic but transduces with the electromagnetic frequency spectrum to produce perceptable, four-dimensional patterns. If so, it is this patterning energy ((whether a person calls it "ether" or "zero point energy")) which allows the inner identity of "Billy the Space Cadet" to shape shift into the lightning quick "Captain Marvel" in Olympian form.

KID STUFF

In the heated debate over whether or not the government has connected negatively with "aliens" and/or conducts "black world" ufo research in general, it is often forgotten that the reason this debate is occurring at all is that persons have had experiences which they cannot describe or explain in mundane terms. Part of the entire experience of being unable to fully grasp or describe any experience involves the feeling of being "controlled" by limitation of knowledge about some unusual event.

Since this informational limitation is similar to the lack of context and "real life" perspective experienced by intelligent children who--despite their potential "mind power"--are still functionally controlled by adult priorities, the result in the life of the percipient and/or analyst of "ufo" and/or "supernatural" occurrences may be a certain infantilization of self-concept.

It is not positive to tolerate the infantile ravings or exaggerations of persons who are substituting "the government" and/or "the aliens" for "mommy & daddy" in complaints about numinous control and restraint of their activities. The task of the analyst of these "abduction" situations is to get past the surface of these infantile claims in order to ascertain whether the person is making these statements because he or she has had mind bending experiences which cannot be explained in ordinary terms OR simply because this individual cannot balance such mundane concerns as personal finances with other troublesome personal affairs now in progress.

Passing from the "kid stuff" of behaviorist psychology into the Capricorn sort of "kid stuff"; reports of mutilated goats (chupacabras) continue to be made by residents of various locations in Puerto Rico.

However, despite the mysterious surgical expertise of certain of these mutilations, it is wise to remember that religious sects which regularly practice blood sacrifice are common in South America, Puerto Rico and the Caribbean islands. Possibly, among wealthy followers of these sects, there exist people with access to sophisticated medical techniques who practice clandestine blood sacrifice and are responsible for the "chupacabras".

It should be remembered that strict, orthodox Catholicism, using the effigy of a man being tortured on a cross as an item of worship, contains in the original liturgy of the Mass repeated references to symbolic blood sacrifice. Individuals strongly influenced by this religion in combination with indigenous native South American and imported African religions which ((in their original, traditional form)) literally practice blood sacrifice might become extreme mentally and direct their intellectual gifts toward implementing the clandestine propitiation of "gods" with blood sacrifice for whatever eccentric reason seems important. Usually, clandestine blood sacrifice is performed to obtain personal power. It is a mistake of cultural chauvinism to suppose that persons from a Hispanic cultural background would be incapable of such sophisticated deception.

OR are interdimensional creatures with a blood lust actually attracted to geographical locations and circumstances wherein they are honored by tradition as being a real possibility?

The only way, amid the increasing number of bedroom and parlour ufo abductions now being reported, to approach a documentation of genuine ufo encounters is to insist on some four-dimensional documentation or verification which situates the occurrence within some nexus of shared reality, as we human beings currently understand shared reality.

Walter Webb's investigation entitled Encounter At Buff Ledge is one example of this sort of documentation. Whatever happened, one can certainly say something happened when two teenagers reported odd effects from a ufo abduction at the Buff Ledge summer camp. Webb has documented not simply the hypnotic regressions of these campers but also the fact that other campers noticed unusual lights over the water on that night as well as an unusual emotional reactivity in the two campers who were allegedly abducted.

As author Jacques Vallee has pointed out on numerous occasions, simple hypnotic regressions of abductees, while this process may therapeutically serve these individuals, is not actually "evidence" of physical abduction since subjects may be cued telepathically, subliminally or by direct verbal suggestion from the hypnotist.

This possibility of subliminal cuing is absolutely true and a very important flaw in the use of hypnosis for the investigation of crimes. Yet a conundrum arises here. If, as seems possible from the statements of abductees as to "missing time", "paralysis" and similar mind/body effects, there has been a form of hypnosis as part of the original abduction experience, then significant mental blocks may have been set up by advanced intelligence which can only be removed or breached by a similar use of hypno-telepathic persuasion.

In listening to the tape of a hypnotic regression of a person who has written about his own ufo encounters as well as the alleged "ufo" encounters of a number of other contactees, I was struck by the failure of this individual to recognize the significance of a visual image which came to his mind while he was under hypnosis for the purpose of ufo investigation. This individual had previously given me some background material about himself to read, and I knew this very striking self-portrait (which was of "my skull of steel, my eyes of ice blue gas") to be from one of his early poems.

During his regression by veteran ufologist Leo Sprinkle, this particular "ice-blue gas/ skull of steel" image came objectively to mind, and was mutually discussed as an image exterior to the percipient. But this distinctive image was not overtly identified by the poet as having occurred as a self-portrait in his own early poem.

This sort of non-identification can mean one of several things: a) a simple failure of mundane memory during a stressful interview b) the implicit split-off from ordinary consciousness of ufo-related inquiry and/or the split-off of "poetry" from "extraterrestrial" considerations OR c) a major mental block which prevents integration of his personal ufo contact experiences (which were the stated purpose of Sprinkle's regression) into the flow of shared, conscious reality which includes the mundane "identity factor" that this individual ((who was in his fifties at the time of Sprinkle's regression)) wrote poems containing visionary imagery when he was a young man.

If any one of these possibilities is true, then standard techniques of hypnosis were not able to breach this man's mental blockage or enhance his mundane memory of personal matters.

We are at a very elementary stage in understanding the functions of various perplexing levels of body/mind consciousness and we need to admit our limitations and probe further into these mysteries.
